

6 Components of Reading

An interactive workshop on teaching the essential skills of reading

What the data tell us...

Based on results for more than 20,000 students tutored in reading, plus the exceptional work of the National Reading Panel, reading instruction that integrates the 6 components leads to significant improvements in students' reading ability. This workshop draws from research data and from education practice to help teachers create learning opportunities that work.

About the presenter...

David Bowman directed the Three Rivers Education Foundation reading intervention program, which served more than 20,000 students. He is a former teacher, reading specialist, and state and federal project director. David Bowman is an interactive and engaging presenter with nearly 3 decades of helping improve students' learning opportunities. He is the author of the reading instruction guide Roadmap for Reading Instruction.

More info:

Contact David Bowman via e-mail at david@riroadmap.com

What it's about:

The 6 components of reading that students need to master to become strong, proficient readers. Teachers develop a strong understanding of the 6 components and learn strategies and instructional activities to help students gain these essential skills.

How it's done:

Teachers learn the 6 components through engaging in proven strategies and activities for teaching reading. Teachers improve their knowledge of what to teach AND how to teach the reading skills students need.

The outcome:

Teachers can make informed instructional decisions, use engaging and effective learning activities, and help students become great readers!